

June 23rd

The night of June 23, 2019 without being able to speak all night. I felt like it wasn't my place, I felt displaced from all the people around me. All the fault of my introverted self. Not being able to talk to anyone, not feeling sure what to say or what to do. In your head you shuffle through various options you wonder when is the best time to jump into the conversation others are having, you think they are not going to like what you are going to say you are going to bore them, you feel like you don't have to be there no one wants you to be there.

You get to a point where you think you hate everybody, you feel more insecure with yourself, you can't say anything anymore, you feel alone.

But there comes a time when you meet someone who wants to change you to see you better. It helps you to have that security that was taken away from you, it helps you to be able to speak without fear of what others might think. You realize that this person is the only one who listens to you when you talk, who doesn't mind, who wants to know more about you.

And at that precise moment when you see that you want to change, you want to start talking, to socialize, to let yourself be known by the world because you have already noticed that feeling of seeing that someone cares about what you have to say. Of course it is not an easy path, it does not change from one day to the next, you have to move forward little by little without hurry.

It is not a race in which the one who arrives first is the best. Not at all, you have to advance at your own pace without rushing, you have to advance at the pace that everyone can, and that's what I did and what I continue to do, advancing a little every day. Because I know I have friends who do care about what I have to explain.

How I feel. And that's the reason why I try to get a little bit better every day. And I also do it for myself because I am a person like everyone else, who likes to be with friends, draw which is my favorite hobby, music is the one that awakens in me the strongest feelings I have, watching movies and goofing off. I am a person who has her flaws and virtues like everyone else, and that doesn't make you better or worse.

Right now I feel much more sure of myself, I know what I want to say at all times. In life you have to keep changing and growing. And that's what I'm achieving. As for example in this year's presentations, you have already told me that every presentation I make I look more confident. I have full confidence that everything I want to do, everything I long for, I will get it, sooner or later but in the end I will get it, with perseverance.

And to see these changes in me makes me proud, to see that I am changing for the better and that I am better with myself, that everything works out well if you put your mind to it. For all that I have explained, for the way I am and the way I do things, I think that my place in the commercial field would be in logistics.

Since I have many qualities that are perfect to be in it. Like how tidy I am, I like to have everything well ordered, I am very picky about it, seeing things badly put or disordered gets on my nerves. I also have a very strong sense of leadership. I like to be in control of everything and if I don't have it, I don't think it's going to go well. I tend to be very flexible since I believe that every opinion is valid and if you put together several opinions it can be better, since 4 eyes see more than 2.

With these four things I have just said about my personality, I think I fit much better in logistics than in any other sector.
